

East Asia
Branch

CI Arb

Appointing Arbitrators and Challenging the Jurisdiction of an Arbitrator

23rd November 2017

Peter Scott Caldwell

Terms of Appointment including Remuneration

Terms of Appointment including Remuneration

➤ General Principles

Terms of Appointment including Remuneration

➤ General Principles

➤ Terms of Remuneration

Interviews for Prospective Arbitrators

Interviews for Prospective Arbitrators

➤ General Principles

Interviews for Prospective Arbitrators

- General Principles
- Matters to Discuss

Interviews for Prospective Arbitrators

- General Principles
- Matters to Discuss
- Matters Not to Discuss

Interviews for Prospective Arbitrators

- General Principles
- Matters to Discuss
- Matters Not to Discuss
- Sole or Presiding Arbitrator Interviews

Jurisdictional Challenges

10

Jurisdictional Challenges

➤ General Principles

Jurisdictional Challenges

➤ General Principles

➤ Common Types of Challenge

"However, given the fact that arbitrability is treated as a separate ground for setting aside and/or refusing enforcement and/or recognition of arbitral awards, it suffices, for the purpose of the present Guideline, to state that arbitrators are indeed expected to observe any prevailing and overriding norms on arbitrability under the lex arbitri and/or the lex loci executionis when deciding on the dispute(s) arising between the parties."

Jurisdictional Challenges

- Dealing with Challenges
- Common Types of Challenge
- Factors to Take into Account

Jurisdictional Challenges

- Dealing with Challenges
- Common Types of Challenge
- Factors to Take into Account
- Ruling on Jurisdiction

